BIO

Jason Schuster began working in art departments doing construction and propmaking for films like The Rock and Titanic. The experience he gained on those projects he now counts as a major asset in designing sets. Schuster's focus as a designer is upholding the story; he believes it's easy to create bright, shiny and slick sets to dazzle the eye, but it takes more skill to design believable sets. Working in over a dozen countries, Schuster has created an exact replica of Air Force One; designed sets, props and clothing for animals like vultures and elephants; and simulated an architectural dig above ground. He lives in Los Angeles.
